

Where can I find information about South Africa's enterprise & supplier development programmes?ESDSA is South Africa's most comprehensive source of Enterprise and Supplier Development Programme information. We've done months and months of research on the programmes that exist in the South African Enterprise and Supplier Development landscape so that entrepreneurs don't have to. Why is enterprise & supplier development important in South Africa?We recognise that by enabling our Entrepreneurs we are enabling South Africa's future economic growth. Enterprise and Supplier Development is one of the mechanisms through which large corporate companies are seeking to foster entrepreneurial and small business development. What is enterprise & Supplier Development (ESD)?Enterprise and supplier development (ESD) programmes have gained increasing attention as vehicles that support the growth and sustainability of small and growing enterprises or the SMME sector in South Africa. How can GES and QSEs support local businesses in South Africa?It enhances your efforts to support local businesses by providing a streamlined platform for identifying and selecting EMEs for ESD programs and procurement opportunities. Through this platform, GEs, QSEs, and EMEs can work together to strengthen the South African economy. Are SMME programmes affecting South Africa's entrepreneurial capacity and capabilities?However, despite a variety of measures having been put in place to develop the SMME sector in South Africa and ESD programmes being valued at between R20 billion and R30 billion per annum, the impact of such programmes in terms of developing the country's entrepreneurial capacity and capabilities remains uncertain. Is the entrepreneurial ecosystem promising in South Africa?In assessing the entrepreneurial ecosystem in South Africa, the latest ANDE (Davidson et.al.,) report, which covers the critical role of capacity development providers, investors and other ecosystem players in supporting the growth of SMMEs, asserts: "The South African entrepreneurial ecosystem is promising."
